

High Fives

Facilitator Moves

PROCESS

- Members stand.
- Participants locate two other people who are currently not at the same table and give them a high five.
- When a group of three members has been established, participants gather their belongings, find a new table, and sit and wait for instructions.

ALTERNATIVES

- Instruct members to accomplish a task when seated. Example: Review key points from previous agenda item and activate knowledge about the item the group is about to address.

TIPS

- Use the variation above when one of your goals is to support the development of relationships within the group.
- This variation can be helpful to introverted people because it gives them something to talk about when sitting with the trio.
